Our young people, or The Glow Gang, as they have named themselves, presented a wonderful Easter drama. It was fun in some parts and very moving in others, a perfect balance of the sadness of Good Friday and the joy of Easter Sunday. From oldest to youngest, they all made an important contribution to the performance. And it was great to see extended family and friends enjoying the drama too. We're thrilled to have so much young talent in Cornerstone and can't wait for the next presentation.

Family Worship

At times since we've been married, Teri and I have taken time daily to read God's word and pray together. We've not been consistent in this good habit. With each of our children we've taken time while putting them to bed to read from God's word and pray with them. But, as they got older, with each of them, that night time ritual also ceased.

For some time, I've been convicted that we don't have a habit of praying together as a family, of studying God's word or of worshipping Him together. At the start of this year I started reading from the bible after our evening meal and praying for our family while we're all together.

I have a sense this is important, that it is a habit I need to continue to develop and to teach my family to develop. It strikes me that the believers in the early church broke bread together in their homes (Acts 2: 46-47), that while they attended the temple together, they also met together in their homes and praised God. After the church was persecuted and they could no longer meet openly, they were able to continue to worship in their homes. Could your family benefit from learning to worship God together?
